Being “first among equals” is no easy task. Whether you have years of experience with the gavel – or you have yet to chair your first meeting – there’s always opportunity to be more effective and efficient as a leader. This session will include an overview of parliamentary procedure and Roberts’ Rules. We will also discuss the role of the Chair, building effective relationships with your elected official peers, and setting effective cultural norms for your elected body. The combination of these elements will result in meetings that are more effective – and more efficient.

9:30 – 10:45 a.m. | Immigrants and Minnesota’s Workforce

Presenter: Ryan Allen, Associate Professor, Humphrey School of Public Affairs

Affiliate faculty member with University of Minnesota – Extension & the Minnesota Population Center

In coming years, the aging out of Baby Boomers from the workforce along with a slowing fertility rate will yield significant constraints on the number of prospective employees in the U.S. Without a substantial increase of migration, Minnesota’s labor force will likely grow much slower than it has in recent years. This will make filling job vacancies and economic growth more challenging into the future. This session will include the review of the 2017 UM report, authored by Professor Allen in consultation with numerous stakeholders, about the role of international immigration in Minnesota.
